

DEMAND YOUR DOTRIGHTS

Has Your Online Speech Been Silenced?

Join us for a panel discussion about Internet rights, privacy, and free speech.

Ever posted an image online? If so, a new Tennessee law exposes you to potential prosecution. The “offensive images” law makes it a crime to transmit any image online that causes “emotional distress” to any individual leaving everyone with an online presence vulnerable to prosecution. Join us to discuss this new law and more issues dealing with online privacy and free speech.

Wednesday, November 9, 2011 at 3:30pm
University of Memphis
Manning Hall, Room 332

Panelists include:

Allie Bohm, National ACLU Policy and Advocacy Strategist.

Kris Markman, assistant professor in the Department of Communication at the University of Memphis.

This event is free!

[www.aclu-tn.org/
dotRights.html](http://www.aclu-tn.org/dotRights.html)